DOWNS' ELIXIR.
N. H. DOWNS'
Vegetable Balsamic
ELIXIR
For the cure of
Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and all diseases of the Throat, Chest, and Lungs. In all cases where this Elixir is used its efficacy is at once manifested, convincing the most incredulous that is not incurable, if properly attended to.—At its commencement it is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the Lungs; then an inflamation, when the cough is rather dry, local fever, and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chills more common. This Elixir in curing the above complaints, operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflamation from the lungs to the surface, and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration.
CONSUMPTION
It heals the ulcerated surfaces
and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy. It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from strong opiate and astringent articles, which are of so drying a nature as to be in great danger of destroying the patient; whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but, by removing the cause, consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well. Send address for pamphlet giving full directions, free.
Price 35 cts., 50 cts., and $1 00 per bottle.

"BLACK DEATH."

The Fearful Experiences of the Goldfinder's Crew.

Captain E. B. Dennis, of the brig Goldfinder, is a tall, wiry man of middle age, with black hair and moustache, a handsome face and a pleasant address. He belongs in Rockland, Me., where he has a wife and two children. He gives the following account of his terrible experiences at sea, recently:

The brig Goldfinder, owned in Port au Prince, sailed from Miragoane, Hayti, on the 23d of December last, with a cargo of logwood and a crew of five white and two colored men. One of the latter was a native of Miragoane, who stowed himself away and made his appearance from the hold of the brig when we were a few hours out. Three of our crew shipped from Boston. H. C. Hanson, the mate, and the only other survivor of the voyage beside myself, is a Norwegian. The rest of the crew were John Mickhelsson, a native of Finland, 22 years old; Tariet Johnson, a native of Norway, 21 years old; Thomas Morne, a native of France, 19 years old; Joseph Fuller, the cook (colored), a native of Virginia, about 45 years old. The stowaway gave his name as J. Pratto. As you see, the crew were all young men with one exception, and none of them were married.

We had been out three days before anything happened worthy of note. Then began our experience with the "black death." That is a name which perfectly describes the disease. It was very like the yellow fever in its symptoms and results. It generally ran four days. The first symptoms were pains in the head and neck, and the last black vomit, which immediately preceded death.

The sufferings of the victims were terrible. I was the first one affected, but after a painful illness I recovered. On the eighth day out it began to rage among the crew, and their bodies were consigned to the deep in rapid succession. John Mickelsson died December 27. Tariet Johnson died January 6 and was buried in latitude 35 20 north, longitude 74 west. Thomas Morne expired on the 7th, and was laid to rest in latitude 36 45 and longitude 75. The others took the disease, but recovered. Four men, just escaped from a terrible sickness, were thus left to man the vessel. The services of those who died were very brief. We had only time to read a chapter out of the good book and then hurry back to the stern duties before us again.

All at once, when we were just beginning to believe that we had got over the worst of our calamities, we encountered a new danger. The weather, which had been fine till we got to Cape Hatteras, then began to grow cold. In latitude 39 20, longitude 73, we were met by a hurricane from the northeast. The thermometer fell below freezing point and it snowed hard. The steward, the negro stowaway, the mate and myself constituted the crew at this time. Two of these men were green hands. If you were a seaman you would understand what that meant to the mate and myself. These men scarcely knew the foresheet from the mainmast, and the strain of the work of keeping the vessel right side up all came on us. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon we shortened sail. The gale became stronger every minute and the cold was intense. At 6 o'clock it was necessary to heave the vessel to. It continued to blow heavily during the 9th. On that day we threw the lead and found we had fifteen fathoms of water. Then we realized that we must wear ship and heave to on the port tack to keep off the shore if we didn't want to go to pieces on the beach.

Soon we found that the water was gaining on us below, and all hands had to take to the pumps. It was cold work. Our hands and feet were frozen, and exhaustion from exposure came upon us. We were now startled by a fresh terror. At 1.30 I was at the wheel. It was snowing so hard that I could see but a short distance before me. We were running west southwest at the rate of about ten knots an hour. Of a sudden I heard the whistle of a steamer. I put the wheel hard aport, and the next minute a huge vessel passed close by us. It was a wonder that it had not cut us in two. We were saved from death simply by a heavy sea which thrust us out of the way just in time.

It seemed that everything conspired to increase the horrors of our situation. We no sooner escaped from this alarm when we were called upon to witness another horror. J. Pratto, the negro stowaway, had gone mad. In the morning he had come to me and said that he was cold. He was shivering. His hands and knees shook. I gave him a suit of oil clothes, mittens and stockings, though I saw that he was not frozen at all. Now upon going forward I found him dancing stark naked upon the deck in all the cold. I drove him into the galley and came back to the pumps. In a short time he was running about the deck again. Once more we shut him up. In half an hour the mate came to me and said, "That man foward is raving crazy. He's staving himself to pieces." The mate took the wheel and I went forward. I found that the poor stowaway had thrown his head into the coal ashes in front of the cook's stove. His face and eyes were full of them. He had pounded and banged himself about until he was covered with blood. We were obliged to lash him up to keep him from tearing himself to pieces. He died soon after.

Meantime our sufferings were intense. In the height of the storm our topsails were blown away like so many ribbons, and the other sails split in several places. The vessel soon became covered with a thick layer of ice from topmast to water line. The deck was one sheet of ice, the sails as stiff as boards, while the ropes were hung with icicles. The vessel could not have looked more frigid if it had been an Arctic explorer. Our ears, hands and faces soon presented a pitiful sight. They were terribly frost-bitten, and we endured all that men could endure and live. So desperate did our condition become that we could not cook food and were threatened with starvation. All we could do was to keep the brig on her course and wait for assistance. We encountered a snow storm Saturday, which soon almost filled the decks, and we were unable to shovel the snow off. We managed to live, however, even through this, though Joseph Fuller, who was growing weaker and weaker every day—finally being ordered to do so—attempted to go below, but fell down and was actually frozen before our eyes. We had hardly sufficient strength left to throw him overboard. We buried the steward and the stowaway on the same day about twenty miles off Cape May.

The mate and I alone remained, and the prospect indeed looked dark for us. What we had suffered, the suspense, anxiety, exposure and loss of sleep were all against our chances for life. On Thursday, to our great joy, we sighted Cape Henlopen, and at 1 o'clock in the afternoon cast anchor in fifty fathom chain, ten miles off Henlopen light. We spoke pilot boat No. 2 for a couple of men to help us. The captain declined to come, but said he would report our case at the breakwater. This he did, though we were obliged to wait till 7 P. M. before help came. Finally the tug boat North America came out and carried us into smooth water, where we anchored at 9 P. M. The mate had frozen his fingers; I had frozen my feet and hands. The mate has recovered, and you see that I am doing as well as could be expected.

GAMBETTA.

A PEN PORTRAIT OF A GREAT MAN.

[Edward King in the Boston Journal.]

I.

PARIS, Monday evening, Jan. 1. In my study is the portrait of the man who went out of life last night, just as the old year came to its close; and looking at that picture, which must henceforth have such a peculiarly pathetic interest for us, I was profoundly impressed with the lusty vigor, the abundant life, of which it seemed the index. Not a handsome face, nor yet an aristocratic or refined one, but a stranger who had heard but little of Gambetta, and had never seen him, might say, in contemplating it, "This is the face of a man of vast power, who would overcome obstacles unsurmountable by other men; who would not be cast down by adversity; a man fertile in surprises, abounding in unexpected triumphs, capable of turning imminent defeat into immediate victory!"

The abundant vivacity of the South, married to the calculating energy of a Parisian man of the world, are in these lineaments which will never more be seen irradiated by the fire of consummate genius in the midst of some great debate in the Chamber. The passionately eloquent lawyer, the defender of Baudin, the mighty tribune, the brilliant member of the Opposition to the Second Empire, the ex-dictator, the fiery soul who could not brook the idea of tame submission to the enemy even after hope was lost; the noble parliamentarian, the sincere Republican and patriot; the adroit and far-seeing politician, is gone. The splendid voice is hushed; the courageous opponent of clerical intrigue has departed for his long home. Calumny, party meanness, the silly hates of petty partisans, the unreasoning envy of the narrow-minded, the fierce hatred of the bigots, the disdain of the worsted aristocrats, the maneuvres of foreign courts afraid of what Gambetta might do should he reach supreme power, in France—these have all been concentrated against him—and it is not strange that he has fallen by the way. The vested interests, the monopolies of State and Church, are for a short time as safe as they were before Gambetta was born; for who is there to take up his unfinished task? He was the fountain from which sprang Republican energy. There were moments when the entire Republican organization of the country seemed epitomized in him. He was leader, teacher, master, father, mentor. When the men who had been unfitted, by generations of oppression, for the practice of constitutional government, made blunders which were almost criminal, he was at hand to correct them and to save the situation. His fine intellect was at the service of every chief of a group who found that in endeavoring to aid in conducting the affairs of the country he was getting beyond his depth. Wails could not hem him in nor hostile troops appal him; he soared above them and went to carry encouragement to his brethren in the South. "The Minister of the Interior and of War," as he is styled in the documents signed by him during the terrible autumn of 1870, doubtless ruined his health in those exciting days, and when, after the war was over, he now and then showed signs of weariness, his ignoble critics at once attributed his failing to dissipation of the grosser sort. There are Catholic households in which it is firmly believed that Gambetta was a monster of iniquity, reeking in vice and wallowing in crime. These same persons will go down to their graves believing that the celebrated orator received his death wound at the hands of a vindictive and jealous woman.

II.

On this point, fortunately, there is abundant evidence to prove that Gambetta's wound was the result of his own carelessness in handling a revolver. No person fired a pistol at him, and on the day that the accident occurred he had no quarrel with any human being. This I have been assured by unimpeachable authority. The calumny was most ingeniously started, on the principle laid down by the immortal Basil in Beaumarchais' comedy—that whether or not the slander were true, some of it would infallibly stick to the victim. There are as many versions of the story as there are parties in France—which is equivalent to saying that there are a great many. Most of the varied fabrications you have already heard. If any of them are true, it would be strange if the authorities had not already laid hands upon the person who would thus have been the indirect cause of Gambetta's death. The French are very severe in such cases, and no matter what might have been the claims of the woman upon the orator and statesman, she would run serious risk of severe punishment. No, the tale was invented; and only those who are anxious to blacken Gambetta's memory will honor it with any credence. The Republique Francaise, the newspaper owned in part by Gambetta, denied the story without hesitating to allude to it. The Temps also expressly stated that "the influence of the wound which M. Gambetta accidentally inflicted upon himself" was very grave. And there is plenty of other testimony to show that the intelligent Republicans have not been deceived by the skillful and scandalous lie, arranged with a view to blackening the man's name should he recover, and making him seem less sacred in the eyes of his admirers should he be taken away. He had lived down a goodly number of lies. Every one who follows at all the course of French politics will remember how magnificently he triumphed over his calumniators in the matter of the arms contract. For years since the war there had been a legend that Gambetta had made thirty or forty millions of francs at one fell sweep by a rather questionable "operation" in arms while the country was bleeding from every vein. The Bonapartists played this stupid lie as their last card against Gambetta. But they played it in vain. His vindication was so complete that not one of the men who hate him so bitterly has ever dared since that time to revive the accusation, so in time all but the bigots will be convinced that the latest and most cruel of all the lies was a cowardly maneuvre, unworthy the age in which we live. The article published a few weeks ago, called "She and He," and intimating that Gambetta's conduct toward a lady with whom he had a liaison of very long duration, had not been such as men of the world hold to be correct, did a vast deal of mischief. Whether or not there were any foundation for that, it is consoling to know that there was none for the newer and more malicious slander.

III

It would not be strange if Gambetta dead should for the next ten years be a greater force in France than Gambetta living could have been. The shock of his loss has been sudden and almost universally unexpected. His convalescence was supposed to have set in, and Dr. Charcot, the renowned physician, who called in at Minister Morton's yesterday afternoon, remarked that the patient was looking better than for several days previous. His eyes were clearer and more natural, and he seemed more at ease. When, thereafter, Gambetta fell into a dangerous condition at a little before 10, the suspense was painful. Ville d'Avray is some distance from Paris; in fact, it is at the very gates of Versailles; and the friends were summoned to long night rides only to find the sick man in his last agony when they arrived. Gambetta's faithful henchman, M. Spuller, a capable and efficient editor and politician, was with him to the last. M. Joseph Reinach, M. Paul Best, M. Etienne, Doctor Fienzal were also present. M. Arnaud de l'Ariege, one of Gambetta's warmest friends and supporters, had been with the sick man all day, but at early evening, deceived by the appearance of comparative comfort, came into Paris, and did not learn until a very late hour of the sudden and fatal change. Doctor Lannelongue, who saw the patient shortly before 10, gave it as his opinion that a critical moment was at hand, and expressed some doubts as to M. Gambetta's survival. At half-past 10, M. Gambetta began to gasp for breath and had several convulsions. His agony for a time was very great. Every moment or two he asked for a cooling drink. It was supposed that the abscess which determined the inflammation had broken. At half-past 11, Gambetta closed his eyes and all present thought he had gone to sleep. Doctor Fienzal bent over him, and when he arose again, announced in a trembling voice that the fatal instant was near. Almost immediately thereafter Gambetta opened his eyes and ceased to breathe. Both Paul Best and Doctor Fienzal lingered above him a moment, as if clinging to some last despairing hope; then they turned sorrowfully away. Five minutes before midnight was marked by the clock. This was truly the very last great event of the year 1882. Some time after death M. Gambetta's face was quite livid. The eyes were wide open and had a startling, life-like expression in them. A smile was at the lips—as if the expression of gratification at relief from pain. The hair was thrown carelessly back from the brow. Nobility of expression, high purpose, were written on the dead mask. It was a face on which all the departed statesman's friends might look with pride.

IV.

Gambetta would have been more than human had he not felt most keenly his fall from power, and his subsequent temporary loss of popularity; but had his health and life been spared, he would have been back in the struggle and up at the head very soon once more. The joy of strife, the keenness of battle, gave him sudden and luminous inspirations which seemed like sorcery. If he went into the Chamber at two, apparently half-dead with overwork, you never could swear that he might not loom up, magnificently combative, and set all minds seething by one of his mightiest speeches, before eight o'clock. His enemies listened to him with startled and unquiet air, as if afraid that he would convince them despite themselves. In 1877 he was a constant support to the Republicans who flagged somewhat under the pressure of the counter revolution. His persecution by the men of the sixteenth of May is one of his chief glories. He was the apostle of free speech in this country where it had so long been impossible for a man to say what he thought. He was the first great knight of freedom under the Third Republic. Sometimes his processes were halting, now and then there was too much of Opportunism in his conduct but his heart was sound and right. A monarchical paper this morning sneeringly remarks that it will be difficult to point out any important work which M. Gambetta has accomplished. It is true that he left his work undone, but he had already begun the pacific although stern revolution which nothing can now stay. His voice was the voice of one crying in the desert, but its trumpet note made old, tyrannical and false societies and worn-out creeds shake, and it aroused the true Liberals to a sense of their duty. It requires more than courage, it demands inspiration and the noblest and highest form of self-sacrifice to stand for the truth as Gambetta did; to raise his hand against Clericalism, and to cry 'Down you must go;' to forswear social distinctions and to abandon all thought of promotion, rather than for one moment to sacrifice an iota of his sacred mission; to preach Liberty, National Sentiment, Patriotism, to a community grown selfish and suspicious under centuries of monarchy; to rise up, child of the people as he was—out of the obscurity of a wretched Southern village—and to come into Parisian civilization, worm-eaten, insincere as it is, and to cry havoc against shams, against tyrannous monopolies which are eating out the hearts of the very people willingly and blindly supporting them; to beard haughty aristocrats and gilt-edged Cæsars, and to stun them by the thunder of his speech, while he dazzled them by the lightning of his thought. I say it takes fine and noble genius, and rare and exquisite abnegation of self, and heartfelt love for liberty, to undertake all these things; and Frenchmen of all classes will some day say so, too. Is a vivifying, electrifying force, a souffle which infuses a new enthusiasm into a nation's life—not a precious gift at any time in any country—but most especially among a people which longs for liberty yet knows not how to practice it; which dreads the risk without which the prize cannot be obtained. When passion and perjudice have died away—when Gambetta's figure is more remote from those among whom he lived and toiled and suffered, it will be seen that he was a fountain head of liberalism—a sincere patriot, interpreting with kindly patience the forms of constitutional government to his capricious countrymen; a gigantic worker, giving his life blood to his fellowmen, taking their criticisms and curses as gracefully as if he were receiving thanks; walking his own way with assured step, and always with a sublime pity for the incapacity of others to see the opportunities which France had before her. When his enemies accused him of a longing to be a Cæsar, he was cut to the heart; in the anguish of his spirit he cried out once—but only once—"Fools and blind men—am I not toiling for you—and for my country—not for myself?" The people from whom he had risen, loved him; the mobs of Belleville dreaded his anger, but secretly adored him; his illness brought him tokens of sympathy from thousands of parishes in all parts of France.

He had his faults; perhaps he might have been rash in foreign policy; possibly he was too unbending in his war upon the church; his youth had been wild. But who shall sit in judgment upon him? Allons, we must not gossip about his failings before his eyes are closed for the last time. The pathos of his early death—he was but forty-two years old—impresses all. "Sir," said the servant who brought me my breakfast this morning, "when I read that man's death in the paper to-day, I shed tears, and I am not ashamed of them."

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

The Lewiston Journal says: The doctors made a post mortem examination of the remains of the late Cyril W. Walker, Thursday afternoon. One lung was filled with clotted blood. The examination proved that Walker's death was produced by a sudden expansion of the lungs caused by exposure or a sudden cold.

Cumberland.

The Portland Press says: Truant Officer Beal sent back to Boston, Friday night, two boys who had run away from that city. They left good jobs there and had to beg here.

Four young men from Lewiston were on Commercial street, near Union street, Portland, Friday, when a train going towards the Grand Trunk depot approached. Three of them got on the cars in safety, but the fourth caught hold of the hand railing with one hand, but slipped and his legs were dangling, hitting the wheels with each motion of the car. He finally got the other hand hold of the rail, but was unable to draw himself up, and was carried to the Grand Trunk depot, his legs continually hitting the wheels. Fortunately he kept his grip, and was thus saved from a terrible accident. It was a narrow escape. Will people ever learn not to jump on cars while they are in motion?

Cumberland Co. Musical Association held its 13th annual session at Yarmouth on Wednesday and Thursday of last week. There was a good attendance of members from various parts of the county, and the rehearsals under the leadership of Prof. E. A. Blanchard were very satisfactory.

Franklin.

About half-past one o'clock on Thursday afternoon, J. R. Taylor, a highly respected farmer of Norridgewock, went to the barn to feed his cattle, and a few minutes afterward was found dead on the barn floor. He was seventy years old. Heart disease was the cause of his death.

Hancock.

Mr. Robert Chick, a well-known resident of Amherst, met his death last week under singular circumstances. He was engaged in hauling bark, and was driving his team through the village, Monday, when he slipped on an icy spot, and falling, struck on the back of his head, sustaining a severe injury. Congestion of the brain followed, and Wednesday Mr. Chick died. He was sixty-eight years old, and leaves a wife and one son. The deceased formerly lived in Bangor.

York.

Friday, a boy named Eddie Hepworth, of Biddeford, met with an accident while sliding, which is likely to prove fatal. While coming down hill he was thrown off his sled and struck against a tree, injuring his head and spine in a severe manner. The doctors think his recovery doubtful. Eddie is twelve years of age, and a son of Joseph C. Hepworth, an employe in the Laconia mills.

NOT SATISFIED YET

The weekly paper of which ex-Governor Plaisted has recently announced himself the managing editor has the following remark in a recent issue

"The Council, it seems, has selected a messenger and private secretary for Gov Robie Was the Governor consulted in the matter or did the Council seek to force upon him the old messenger of Gov Plaisted?"

To which the Somerset Reporter replies

The Council has not selected a 'messenger and private secretary' for Gov Robie There is no such officer The Governor and Council have selected Maj Chas. J House, messenger to the Governor and Council—nothing more, nothing less As a matter of fact, Governor Robie did not seek to influence the Councillors in their selection of a messenger, knowing that they are as much interested as he is Gov Plaisted raised an issue with his Council on this matter just as soon as he was seated in the Gubernatorial chair went to the people with it in September making it one of the prominent issues of the campaign

Ye and it would seem that an ordinary man would have been satisfied by the result that the "Messenger" controversy was no morally a profitable one for the Governor who forced his own son into the place of a disabled soldier, in spite of the protest of the seven Councillors, each of whom had an equal right with himself in the premises But the more astonishing thing is that after having deprived the Council of the services of a messenger, after having signed warrants for and drawn the entire salary of messenger at $500 per year for his own son, and in addition to that, as we are informed having presented a claim signed a warrant and drawn two hundred dollars in excess of the salary for "extra services of the same son, Governor Plaisted should desire to further agitate a matter that has been throughout so greatly to his discredit

Having forced the employment of his son for two years and received for it a thousand dollars, and then having drawn two hundred extra for the same time, thus putting the snug sum of twelve hundred dollars into the Gubernatorial pocket it would seem that Governor Plaisted might afford to let the messenger matter drop At any rate he does not appear in the light of a first class martyr in the business

THE COLD-TOED PARTY

[N Y Tribune]

If that does not start a boom for Mr Thurman which will sweep him into a Presidential nomination, then there is no gratitude left in the Democratic party Butler's declaration that the 'Government belongs to its friends is cold and meaningless compared with it We should not be at all surprised if the Democracy in the flush of its enthusiasm were to adopt a new name and call itself henceforth 'The Cold Toed Party' What a magic there would be in the name! The pathos of 'Poor Tom's a-cold' would be as nothing compared with it With a ticket of Thurman and Butler on a 'Cold Toe' platform a tremendous campaign could be waged Who can picture the enthusiasm which would sweep over the country at the spectacle of the glorious Democracy crying out as one man 'We have been out in the cold for a quarter of a century Let us come in where we can warm our toes and fill our stomachs at the public expense'

Whether that slogan is raised or not it will inevitably be the issue of the Democracy in the next campaign The utterances of Democratic journals and leaders are all in that strain If the Pendleton law is not repealed before they get in it will be very soon afterward, in case the people are so thoughtless as to trust them with power They are all suffering with extremely cold toes and nothing but a free Government fire will warm them The old cry for a 'change' appears under a new guise The country looked at the crowd shouting for a 'change' in 1880 and decided that it could not and the expense it will look at the same crowd which will come forward begging to have its cold toes warmed in 1884 and unless its wisdom forsakes it will reply again in the negative on the ground that the outlay for fuel would surely bankrupt the Nation

JUSTICE TO FAITHFUL SERVICE

In his report of January 1st to the shareholders of the Chicago St Louis and New Orleans Railroad Company, Mr James C Clark General Manager of the Company made this interesting statement with regard to negro laborers "During the past five years this company has employed a large amount of unskilled labor, chiefly consisting of negroes My experience with this class of labor has been very satisfactory When intelligently directed, properly treated and justly dealt with, there is no better laborer than the negro to be found among any race in the world They are peculiarly fitted for labor in semi tropical climates and by nature cheerful, obedient kind, imitative and contented They are fast learning that 'freedom means honesty, industry and intelligence They are now a valuable laboring population, and each year, as they acquire education, they will become better citizens They should be justly dealt with and treated with the respect due all honest laborers

THE GAME LAWS

A hearing is to be had on the game question at Augusta next week. Nearly 300 deer are reported to have been shot for the Boston market alone this winter, and in summer the pot-hunter does his best to extinguish the trout family. Unless the havoc is made to cease, the Maine woods bid fair to be robbed of their chief attraction to the sportsman and the summer tourist. This subject is attracting special attention in Franklin county. The Phillips Phonograph which is assiduously devoting itself to this subject, remarks

"We believe the petition for allowing the hunting of deer, etc, as early as July, should not be granted. 'Jack hunting' is at best but a snare and a butchery in the hands of expert guides, who are forcing the petition.

From the very seat of war we have a letter now before us, which may throw some light upon these subjects:

'The talk being made by guides about deer and caribou is all bosh All of the leading guides have to-day their cellars full of deer and caribou meat [Eight caribou sure, and more, were killed during the last week of the open season, and frozen up for winter use.—Ed] They are the ones who are slaughtering our deer and caribou It is not the working class of our town who go back into the woods hunting, but our guides, and even the more remote landlords take a hand. These are the ones who want this law fixed to suit them. 'Close time' should commence December 1st. The man who wrote that 'If a man kills more game than he can use, he ought to be hooted out of the woods,' assisted in slaughtering eight caribou the last week in December. Our guides themselves will ere long exterminate the game.'

This is a very severe arraignment of the guides, and comes from reliable hands The guides who reap the golden harvests from visiting sportsmen, should be the last to make a practice of butchering game."

CHILI'S BUMPTIOUSNESS

[From the Philadelphia Press]

Lord Palmerston believed that there was but one man in Europe who understood the Schleswig-Holstein question, and that the knowledge of it killed the unfortunate man. It is doubtful whether as much can be said of the Peruvian-Chili question Beyond the collapse of the two northern republics before the superior address of Chili, few outside of the southern peninsular have much clear knowledge Every body knows that the war came to an end eighteen months ago and that since then the astonished Chilians have been hunting high and low for a government to confirm such a peace as she intends to propose Innumerable ambitious patriots have accepted the burden of the Peruvian Presidency, but none of them have ventured to sign the exactions which the conquerer lays down as the terms of withdrawing his armies Meanwhile the other republics are agitated by rumors that Chili proposes to bring in big bills for indemnification of the wrongs done her by the trade in arms carried on during the late war The truth is that the Chilians are in the bumptious humor that needs cooling by the pressure of some strong neighbor

The New York Tribune cautions a Democratic paper not to be so sure about Governor Butler not being able to get the Democratic nomination for President and says that he can do most anything he undertakes While in the Republican party he made himself so objectionable that Hon F W Bird left it in disgust and exhaustion from fighting Butler and went to the Democracy 'Bird' continues the Tribune 'had hardly struck the roost when Benjamin was beside him Worse still, he got the regular Democratic nomination for Governor and Bird was obliged to signalize his entrance into the party by bolting a regular nomination Nobody who knew Bird well and Butler not very well would have hesitated at that time to have laid a wager of say a million dollars against a nickel that Frank Bird would never be found voting for Butler for Governor But he was all the same And what is more, and must have made Bowles and Robinson turn over in their graves, he has since then been attending dinners in honor of Butler and publicly expressing confidence in him"

PERSONAL AND MISCELLANEOUS

The Troy Times calls for the whipping post for the punishment of ablebodied brutes who beat delicate women

It is reported in Paris that Sarah Bernhardt has lost the eighty thousand dollars which she earned in the United States It is said that she loaned the money, with a promise probably of big interest, to the head of a gambling house That she may return to the United States in search of another bonanza is hinted

Representative Morse gave notice at his banquet in honor of Senator Hoar that he was soon to become an independent rather than a Democratic Representative and told Mr Crapo that if he was a candidate for Governor next fall he will vote for him This is 'interestin' readin' for General Butler's party

DOWNS' ELIXIR.
N. H. DOWNS'
Vegetable Balsamic
ELIXIR
For the cure of
Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and all diseases of the Throat, Chest, and Lungs, In all cases where this Elixir is used its efficacy is at once manifested convincing the most incredulous that
CONSUMPTION
is not incurable if properly attended to—At its commencement it is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the Lungs; then an inflammation, when the cough is rather dry local fever and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chills more common This Elixir in curing the above complaints operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflamation from the lungs to the surface and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration
It heals the ulcerated surfaces
and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever It is free from strong and astringent articles, which are of so drying a nature as to be in great danger of destroying the patient whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but, by removing the cause, consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well. Send address for pamphlet giving full directions free
Price 35 cts 50 cts and $1 00 per bottle
SOLD EVERYWHERE.

The Humbug

But the greatest of all of this ubiquitous bug is guises, is as the Cash Basis Crank It is patent to any one that a cash store must naturally do a much smaller business than one that "chalks it down to responsible parties and therefore does a larger business, and who if he does make a loss once in a while, comes up smiling, which he can well afford to, as by accommodating all his sales are much larger than the timid cash store We have much to say on this subject, but space will not permit this week more than as follows Get any ones CASH PRICE you choose and we will sell you on credit, (if you mean to pay) as low, and in some cases lower

THE RAILWAY HORROR.

A Survivor's Report.

Thrilling Experience

ESCAPE FROM THE BURNING CAR.

TERRIBLE FATE OF THE VICTIMS.

A Survivor's Statement.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 22. Howard Tilton, of Yale, British Columbia, freight agent of the Canadian Pacific railroad, who was on the Southern Pacific train at the time of the disaster says:

"I was asleep in the lower berth when the accident occurred. I was awakened by the terrible speed and rocking of the car I threw up the curtain and looked out of the window. The train was dashing down a grade with frightful rapidity at the rate probably of 70 miles an hour, and I realized that a disaster was imminent. I laid down again to wait for the inevitable, with that feeling that a man must experience when he is standing on a scaffold in expectation of the fall of the trap. It seemed only an instant when the crash came and I was on the left side of the car, which fell upon the right side, and I was covered to my waist with mattresses, woodwork and debris, but found no difficulty in recovering myself The smoke passed through the car giving timely token of impending peril To the right and in my rear I saw Mr and Mrs Porter Ashe, perfectly free, but Miss Peterson's maid was buried under about six feet of debris, on top of which was the water cooler and wash basin Mrs. Ashe endeavored to extricate her and I assisted in clearing away the rubbish. We soon succeeded in pulling her out. They were the only persons in sight. I pushed up the windows on what was then the top of the car and found them to work perfectly, not a pane being crushed. I crawled through and drew Miss Peterson out and Mr and Mrs Ashe followed I asked Porter Ashe to throw out some blankets, which he did and then crawled through himself. Mr. Ashe, Miss Peterson and myself had only our underclothing on, but Mrs. Ashe wore a sealskin sacque The cold was intense

Hurled from my Berth,

"Deep stillness followed the crash and we heard only one scream while we were in the car. As I emerged from the car I saw Mr. Hatch and his mother climbing out of another window. I ran along and found that we could reach the ground by the platform I lowered Miss Peterson, Mr and Mrs Ashe leaping to the ground The upper part of

The Car was in Flames

by this time Passing along by the sleeper I saw the legs of a man protruding from the car. He was piteously calling for help He was cool and thoroughly conscious of his position. I succeeded in partially extricating him, when a train man came to our assistance and we saved him from a horrible death He proved to be John F Cassell, of San Francisco, and was the last person taken from the ruins alive. All human efforts were of no further avail as the sleeper was in a sheet of flame.

"We left the spot and limped down to the bottom of the ravine some fifty feet below, where had now collected ex Gov Downey, Mr Cassell, Mr and Mrs Ashe, Miss Peterson and Capt Waterhouse and daughter A few persons were scattered about us shivering in the blast Among the rocks on the side of the slope lay Wright, the porter.

Wounded to Death,

and begging bitterly for help At the time there were some big strong men fully dressed, parading up and down who were appealed to for help by the injured, but who took no notice whatever of the cries of the suffering I attempted to assist Wright, who was dying, but being worn out could do but little. A brakeman named McKenzie did all in his power for us A locomotive soon came to our relief and conveyed us to a station, where we arrived two hours after the accident occurred Here we were kindly cared for by the railroad officials and others, medical aid was rendered and everything done to relieve our necessities The locomotive then returned to the scene and brought to the station

The Injured Passengers.

Miss Squiers, who was killed, occupied a berth opposite mine. In front of the berth of Miss Squiers Mr Oliver, County Clerk of Lake county, was sleeping He was burned to death His wife was not with him The next berth contained Mr and Mrs Canell He escaped and she was killed A physician occupied the next berth whose name is unknown. He was burned to death and his remains could not be identified All on my side of the car with the exception of Mrs ex-Gov Downey were saved Porter Ashe, his wife and maid occupied a drawing room car In the sleeping car were a lady and her daughter who I believe were Mr and Mrs Brown Capt Waterhouse his wife and two children were also in this car Only a few persons in the dining car escaped and they were more or less injured One tramp who was killed jumped from the train while it was moving at lightning speed, and another was crushed horribly in the wreck J. W. Searle and Capt T. H Thatcher, who were reported among the injured, escaped unhurt. Both were on the coach which kept the track I do not know the cause of the accident and can give no reason for it. The engineer and fireman Hill, of the locomotive, deserve great credit for their untiring efforts in assisting the wounded"

The Coroner's Jury.

A Tehachapi despatch says the coroner's jury found a verdict in the train disaster case, that the victims came to their death by neglect of Conductor Reed and Brakeman Patten The verdict is not yet approved by the Coroner Two bodies have been identified as those of Thomas Keegan and Ferdinand Gromfort, discharged soldiers of Company H, 6th Cavalry.

Twenty-three Below at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Jan 22 Intense cold continues This morning it was 23 degrees below zero. The wind has packed the snow in solid drifts which impede the railroads. ICE-GORGE AT NIAGARA.

Serious Damage to Property.

NIAGARA FALLS, Jan 22. At one A. M. the high wind and water drove such immense quantities of ice over the falls as to most completely fill the gorge below. The ice bridge is over one hundred feet thick in places and it is thrown up along the shore, destroying houses and other property and doing several thousand dollars damage. Two hundred feet of the inclined railway building and the magnificent observatory and dressing rooms below the bank are crushed.

MORE AWFUL CALAMITIES

Terrific Explosion in California.

Powder Works Blown up With Great Loss of Life.

Thirty or Forty Lives Lost.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 22. The total loss by the explosion at Berkeley, is $100 000. The giant powder works were damaged $60 000 and the acid works of Judson & Co $40 000. It is impossible to ascertain the exact loss of life, but it is estimated between 30 and 40 The first explosion occurred about four o'clock in the packing house in which about 200 pounds of powder was stored. As soon as the packing house exploded a number of Chinamen in the other departments fled for their lives and had reached the open space when the mixing house exploded, killing the most of them in their tracks. It is thought that Fierlonck Kompt was killed by this explosion.

Another Explosion.

In about a minute one of the smaller houses exploded, followed immediately by a fourth explosion, which doubtless killed the surviving employes. A workman named August Forgolsky was very seriously injured All the other white men have been accounted for and the dead are all Chinamen. From 30 to 40 houses on the point, occupied by employes, had most of their windows shattered and the doors and sides in many instances dashed in by the concussion

After each explosion the woodwork of the buildings caught fire and burned steadily for several hours. Efforts to prevent the flames reaching the main magazine, containing an immense quantity of powder, were happily successful. The consequences would have been most frightful had the large magazine exploded. One of the superintendents stated that there is enough powder stored there to have destroyed everything on the peninsula.

The cause of the first explosion remains a mystery. Twelve bodies were counted lying in the debris and the coroner's investigation will probably disclose more than double that number. A force of men were engaged all night extinguishing the fire and recovering bodies

A Frightful Scene.

A Berkeley despatch of last night says that it is now known that the number of killed was not as great as at first reported Not over thirty are missing. The fire is still raging and more explosions are expected momentarily The scene in the vicinity is terrible. Bodies can be seen lying near the mine, on fire, but the men dare not rescue them for fear of their own lives. The assistant superintendent is missing and is supposed to be killed. The superintendent was not at the works A workman named Oscar Forgofsky was pulled from the ruins, soon after the explosion, seriously hurt Seven Chinese have been taken from the debris, all badly hurt.

All the houses in a radius of half a mile are completely shattered, and most of the occupants were thrown to the floor. Sheds and barns were laid flat. The buildings of the Judson Works, on the side of the hill where the blasting powder was manufactured, were thrown over and will probably have to be rebuilt.

Magazine in Danger.

The fire is still burning and at 9 P. M. a large magazine is in danger. No attempt is made to check the fire owing to the danger. Many workmen escaped miraculously To-day is the first Sunday in many months that the works were running in full blast. Orders of 70 tons were loaded on schooners at the wharf A driver with a team and a load of powder on the wharf jumped when the first explosion was heard into the water and escaped when his wagon load exploded The wharf has taken fire and is burning rapidly.

Hospitals

have been improvised in the undamaged houses and the wounded cared for Physicians have come from Oakland and other towns This is the most disastrous explosion that ever occurred at these works Should the magazine explode all the houses in Berkeley will be damaged. Efforts will be made to subdue the flames and avert this.

XLVII CONGRESS—Second Session.

Senate

WASHINGTON, Jan 22 A resolution providing for evening sessions to consider the tariff bill was discussed until 1, when the tariff bill was taken up. Pending question was on the motion of Mr. Van Wyck to put all articles in the wood and wooden ware schedule on the free list, which he modified so as to leave a duty of 30 per cent on house and cabinet furniture rough and 35 per cent on same finished. Mr. Conger resumed his remarks on the amendment and said there was pine enough in the United States to supply the demand for 50 years

The Tariff Bill.

Mr. Morrill called up the resolution offered by him last week providing for evening sessions, beginning this evening. His object he said was to ascertain whether any earnest effort was to be made to pass the tariff bill this session. In reply to statements heretofore made that the bill as reported would increase duties instead of reducing them, he read a tabular statement of reductions upon different articles, showing a very large aggregate.

Mr Bayard believed much of the reduction shown by the table would prove illusory. He did not believe however, that anything would be gained by evening sessions.

Mr Hoar said Senators were generally agreed that there ought to be a reduction of tariff, and if this bill, which would relieve the people of burdens amounting from $35,000 000 to $50 000,000, should fail to pass this session that would be the best evidence of the unfitness of the Houses as now constituted for their great function of legislation.

Mr Lapham suggested that reductions made by the bill would be about $70,000,000 including internal revenue reductions.

A Blow at the Lumber Interests.

Mr. Ingalls said he would like to see this schedule separated so as to admit, free of duty, timber squared or sided, sawed boards, planks, deals, whitewood, sycamore, basswood and other sawed lumber and laths

After considerable discussion Mr. Van Wyck accepted the amendment of Mr. Ingalls as a substitute for his own motion to strike out most of the articles in the schedule. The Ingalls amendment was agreed to; yeas, 25; nays, 23. It strikes from the bill, and puts upon the free list, timber squared or sided (not specially enumerated), sawed boards, planks, deals and other lumber of hemlock and whitewood, sycamore, basswood and all other articles of sawed lumber, also laths, shingles and pine and spruce clapboards. Adjourned.

House.

Mr. Caswell, of Wis, introduced a joint resolution appropriating $200,000 to continue work in the Census Bureau, half to be immediately available and balance after July 1st; passed

Mr Joyce, of Vermont, Chairman of the Committee on Pensions, Bounty and Back-pay, reported a bill placing the heirs of colored soldiers on the same footing, in regard to bounty and pensions, as heirs of white soldiers; calendar.

The Senate amendments were concurred in with slight amendment to the House bill to more effectively suppress gaming in the District of Columbia.

A bill was passed to repeal the license tax on commercial travellers in the District of Columbia. The House, at 2:15, went into Committee of the Whole on the Naval Appropriation bill.

Pending consideration of the first paragraph of the bill the committee rose. On motion of Mr. Robeson it was agreed that when the House next goes into committee on the Naval bill all debate on the paragraph and pending amendments be limited to fifteen minutes. Adjourned.

THE CIMBRIA DISASTER.

Fears that all Missing are Lost.

Return of the Hansa.

LONDON, Jan 22. The Times, commenting on the disaster to the steamship Cimbria, says: The officers seem to have done their duty and made every disposition for saving the lives of passengers and crew, that was possible at the moment.

A despatch from Hamburg says: The steamer Hansa has returned from a search for the missing passengers of the steamer Cimbria, which has been unsuccessful. It is feared that all persons at present missing have been lost

The Cimbria lies sunk in 90 feet of water. Three boats were launched before she sank.

LATER—SIXTEEN MORE RESCUED

While Clinging to the Wreck.

HAMBURG, Jan. 22 The Diamant, one of the steamers sent in search of missing passengers and crew of the Cimbria, arrived here this afternoon with sixteen passengers and a fireman of the ill-fated vessel The rescued passengers say that after having left the Cimbria sinking their boat was capsized and they sought refuge in some of the wreck of the Cimbria which was still above water. They remained in this position ten hours, and expecting every moment would be the last, until they were rescued by a boat from the Diamant. Many of those in the boat when she left the Cimbria were drowned upon its capsizing and many others after reaching the rigging would release their hold and were drowned The survivors describe the scenes as horrible and heart rending. All of them praise in the highest the conduct of the captain and crew of the Cimbria, who never moved from their posts and did everything in the power of man to save life until they themselves were engulfed in the waves.

Freezing From Cold.

A Serious Charge.

The rescued passengers affirm that while they were in the rigging the lights of the Sultan were clearly visible, and that their cries for help must have been heard on board the Sultan, which instead of coming to their rescue steamed away. Most of the survivors present a miserable appearance, having lost everything Since landing here everything possible has been done for them. Some have been sent back to homes, and the remainder will continue their voyage Wednesday.

A Conflicting Statement.

LONDON, Jan 22 A steamer captain just from Hamburg states at request of the captain of the Sultan, that the Sultan remained on the scene for five hours but heard no sound, and thought the Cimbria had steamed away without stopping to ascertain his damage.

Officers of the Sultan Arrested.

FRANKFORT, Jan. 22. Officers of the steamer Sultan have been placed in the jail and the vessel seized by the police.

A BOLD THEFT John McGann, residing at 4 Carr street, claims to have been robbed on Sunday forenoon last of $65 Mr. McGann is an industrious laborer who had saved a small amount from his earnings. Mrs. McGann and the children arose quite early Sunday morning and went to the 8 o'clock mass at St. John's Catholic church. Mr. McGann remained in bed, however, and was not aware that a robbery had been committed until his wife's return, shortly after 9 o'clock While McGann slept it seems that the thief entered the house and with a piece of rope fastened the bedroom door so that the occupant of the apartment could not get out, and then going to the front room opened three trunks, which were in a closet, taking from one of them $65 in cash. The robber had keys which opened all the doors of the house through which he passed, and also keys fitting the trunk locks, so that he made no noise whatever. It is evident from his manner of proceeding that the thief was familiar with the house and knew where to look for the money. The money consisted of eleven five-dollar bills and one ten. One bill was on a New York Bank, one on a Rhode Island Bank, and the rest bore the names of Massachusetts Banks. The loss, which is a severe one to Mr. McGann, was reported at police headquarters yesterday afternoon and [illegible] [illegible] be [illegible]

He was a young man of excellent habits and leaves a host of friends in this city, as well as in his new home, who will mourn his early demise.

COASTING CARNIVAL. The boys had a jolly coasting carnival last night on State street and Hammond street hills, and the bright moonlight which illumined the city almost as brilliantly as in the full glare of midday was thoroughly improved. The party which participated in the sport was a numerous one and the excitement continued for several hours. All sorts of sleds were brought into use and a large pung was observed among the myriad vehicles employed. While it is doubtless amusement for the participants it is still a very dangerous pastime to practice in our city streets and if continued very serious results will sooner or later be noticeable

IMPROVEMENTS Extensive improvements have recently been inaugurated at the well-known establishment of A L Boyd & Son, No 11 West Market square The store has been considerably enlarged by the removing of a stairway, and the interior of the establishment has been greatly improved by various shades of paint, blending very harmoniously. New and handsome showcases have been procured and a radical improvement of the place is observed throughout Messrs. A L Boyd & Son, with their increased facilities, are better capable than ever before to serve the public in the line of their specialties, fruit, confectionery and cigars

SLEIGHRIDE AND BALL The trip to Kenduskeag occurred yesterday, and was greatly enjoyed. During the afternoon Mr. Beal's large sleigh, with Mr. Brackett in charge of the reins, and several single and double teams left the city, and after a jolly ride the party reached Kenduskeag Landlord Walker gave them a cordial reception, and a bountiful supper was provided A pleasant dance was then participated in, to music by Andrews' Orchestra, and the evening passed away most happily. Mr. W B. Douse, of this city, officiated as caterer on the occasion. The party arrived in the city, on the return home, not long after midnight, after a delightful sleighride in the gorgeous moonlight. The occasion was one of great enjoyment to all who participated and the trip will long be held in pleasant memory.

The Bowdoin Alumni.

The Boston Advertiser gives the following account of the meeting of the Bowdoin Alumni Association of New York, Friday evening. At the business meeting which preceded the festivities, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Dr. Fordyce Barker, Vice Presidents, Dr Daniel R. Goodwin, General Foster, Mr. E. B Merrill and Mr. Curtis Jewett; Treasurer, Mr. D. A. Eaton; Secretary, James McKeene; Corresponding Secretary, Charles E. Soule. These gentlemen, with about twenty-five others, sat down to a repast of food such as Delmonico alone can give, and of wit such as Bowdoin alone can furnish.

Dr. Barker presided with his well-known elegance of speech and manner. On his right sat the many titled Chamberlain,—General, Governor, President, etc., and on his left the Hon. Cullen Sawtelle and Professor Dunn, formerly of Rutgers College, both class mates of Longfellow, Hawthorne and Abbott Among others, who are quietly, perhaps, but surely carving their names on the pages of history, were Professor C. F Brackett, of Princeton; Professor Newman Smythe, of New Haven, not of Andover; President Daniel R. Goodwin, of Trinity College; Professor Goddard, of the chair of medical jurisprudence at Bowdoin and General John M Brown, of Portland, Me. These gentlemen responded to toasts appropriately offered, among which was one to Longfellow, Fales and Allen, this year deceased, which was drunk in silence and standing.

Among other toasts, especially appropriate, were "Alma Mater," responded to by Governor Chamberlain; "The Pine Tree State, Dirigo Dirigere Direxi Directum," by General John M Brown; "Theology a Progressive Science," by Dr Newman Smythe; "Science the Handmaid of Religion," by Professor Cyrus F. Brackett, in an especially characteristic and entertaining speech. Professor Smythe said we demonstrate prayers in theology as Diogenes demonstrated motion—we get up and move. Professor Goodwin's short illustrations of progress in the study of languages were both entertaining and instructive. This dinner was not completed, as no Bowdoin dinner can be completed, without the customary tribute to the much-loved Professor Packard, whom every Bowdoin graduate remembered One o'clock was not late enough to drive the oldest heads from the table, and so pleasant an evening is rarely spent by young or old.

AMUSEMENTS.

Joshua Whitcomb.

—The public never tire of beholding "Joshua Whitcomb" and this wonderfully successful piece was given another performance in the Opera House last evening before an audience of large numbers. The company is constituted very much as on previous visitations to Bangor and is one of much excellence. Mr. Denman Thompson is as good as in the past and never fails to create amusement. Miss Julia Wilson is as charming a Tot as ever. Mr. Calisce, in the role of John Martin, sings finely Ignatio Martinetti continues to make an excellent Roundy. Miss Isabelle Coe is a most attractive Nellie Primrose. The other parts were taken in a highly creditable manner. The laughter and applause was frequent and prolonged, the audience being very enthusiastic. The music by the orchestra accompanying the company was of a high order and the xylophone solo was rapturously applauded

Lecture by Rev Mr Gerrish

On Thursday evening next Rev. T Gerrish will deliver a lecture in the Union Street Methodist church, subject, "On the Battlefields around Richmond and Petersburg" This is one of the most interesting of the series prepared by him since his recent trip to Southern battlefields, and it will doubtless draw a large audience. The price of tickets will be 25 cents to adults and 15 cents for children

Harvard Concert

We are informed that the Harvard students who comprise an orchestra of thirty performers, known as the "Pierian Club," and four leading solo-vocalists of the Harvard Glee Club, propose to give one of their popular concerts in this city These entertainments in other places are highly spoken of. The college songs form an attractive feature, as rendered by the Glee Club, and the instrumental music by itself is an interesting feature, the orchestra having several talented artists.

Notes

Louis Aldrich and Charles T. Parsloe with a strong star company will present Bartley Campbell's dramatic triumph, "My Partner," in the Opera House one week from to-night.

Webster, the lexicographer, defines Catarrh to be, "a discharge of fluid from the mucous membrane especially of the nose, fauces and bronchial passages, caused by a cold in the head" It is a disease common alike to all classes of society. Unlike an ordinary cold, it cannot be cured by family remedies, but requires an antidote from the ranks of materia medica. The preparation so universally known under the name of Ely's Cream Balm is a sovereign, unfailing cure for Catarrh It is a neat, pleasant, yet thoroughly efficacious remedy. "I have been troubled with Catarrh so badly," writes B. F Leipaner A. M., of Red Bank, N J, "for several years that it seriously affected my voice. I tried various remedies without relief. BLOSSOMS BENEATH THE SOD.

There are pale, sweet blossoms beneath the sod,
That will not bloom till May,
And I long for the first warm blush of Spring,
And the merry swallow upon the wing,
And to hear the first wild robin sing
In the maples over the way.
But faded blossoms of golden-rod
Bend over the blossoms beneath the sod

Oh, the violets waken between the showers,
Like the blue of the April skies,
And the roadside blooms into clover white,
While the buttercups shy, spring up in a night,
And the meadow glows with the golden light
Of the daisies' honest eyes,
I'm weary, so weary of golden-rod,
I long for the blossoms beneath the sod

I long for the buds on the maple trees,
And the green on the lilac bough,
And the hedge rows sweet with the rose's breath,
With the early snow-drops hiding beneath,
And the wild sweet-fern and the cypress wreath,
Where the dry leaves rustle now,
And to see the tall, sweet lilies nod,
Oh, the pure white lilies beneath the sod

And I long for the friends of my childhood days,
That are gone, like the early flowers,
Though the friends around me are true and rare,
Yet I long for those who are never there—
There's a fragrance flown and a hush on the air,
And a sigh on the happiest hours,
I long for the lilies that bloom with God—
The pale, sweet blossoms beneath the sod.

Agricultural.

CORN RAISING IN MAINE.

Some years since I commenced raising corn on my place in Hampden, as an experiment, having doubts about its success as I feared we were too far East, and too near the sea coast, exposed to the cool afternoon sea breezes. With me it has proved a decided success I have during three years experimented as to the best soil for corn, the best fertilizer, the right distance apart to make rows and hills, the number of kernels to a hill, the best mode of cutting and saving corn and fodder, the best time to plant, &c., designing to make corn raising a study in my farming operations. As my health has so far failed as to unfit me for manual labor, I shall have to give up hoed crops, and make hay raising a specialty I will, through the Farmer, give some of the results and conclusions arrived at, for the benefit of Maine farmers First, then, the soil must be made rich by a liberal application of plant food, and so elevated as to be sure from frosts Mucky, spongy land, that has had the wash from higher land for thousands of years but well underdrained so that no water will remain long on the surface, I find best adapted to corn raising, next to this is high, slaty, or gravelly land, that needs not much draining Then a liberal supply of good barn dressing spread evenly over the surface after plowing and then thoroughly barrowed. There is no danger of getting the land too rich for corn Then put in each hill some finely pulverized old dressing, the best I find is that which has laid long under the stable or tie-up next, hog dressing, well rotted, barnyard manure will do well. By experiment I find the best yield with rows four feet apart, hills three, planted with four to six kernels in the hill, rows furrowed both ways I have a marker with wide teeth, so to mark four feet apart with thills for the horse, mark it off with the marker, and then furrow the four feet rows with the horse plow This gives the distance quite perfect I have planted all distances, but to prove which produces the most corn, I last spring furrowed four rows, three feet apart making twelve feet, then three rows four feet, occupying the same ground as the four rows three feet apart. The rows were all of one length—about 50 hills It was harvested separately. The four 3 feet rows had seven baskets of ears, the three 4-feet rows eight, making a gain of one-eighth in favor of the four feet rows occupying the same ground.

To secure the best results, the ground should be stirred often and kept free from weeds I have known many farmers to start well for a corn crop and then let the weeds get a start that just about spoiled the growth of corn. The ground should be stirred just as the corn begins to break ground, this prevents the crows from pulling it and gives the corn a start I go over my corn once with the cultivator, and then when the corn is about spindling with the plow to cover up the weeds and such, so they shall not get a start till the corn about covers the ground When kernels begin to make I go over the ground with the hoe stirring the ground and killing the weeds

I don't think there is as much difference in the seed as people imagine Corn is indigenous to Maine the natives planted it generations before the country was visited by Europeans It acclimates itself I think the seed planted by the Indians would be best if we could get at it. In securing the crop, if I wanted only the corn I would cut the stalks, but to get the most profit would cut the corn at the roots before the frosts, and have it well shocked This makes the fodder worth something, whereas it amounts to nearly nothing if topped

In conclusion, I have to say I believe corn a profitable crop for Maine farmers to raise on all the gravelly high lands suitable for hoed crops. We have as good a climate to get good sound corn as any of the States and can raise from 25 to 100 bushels shelled corn to the acre, but to do this we must make our ground rich, and cultivate so as to keep down the weeds I intended to say a word about the proper time to plant The weather should be sufficiently warm to start the leaves on the trees The Indian rule was to plant when oak leaves were the size of a mouse's ear I find it a good rule to plant when black flies begin to be troublesome

THE GRANGE

It has been for only a comparatively brief period that the Grange has begun to grow in the right direction In the early stages of its existence a selfish direction was given to its affairs by members who failed to comprehend the vital fact, that its chief mission was to make the brain as active as the hand in the agricultural resources of the nation Slowly but surely the idea that the best means of buying and selling was the main thing has given away to the true idea of the founders of the Order, that a higher mental life and unlimited educational possibilities were the paramount objects to be attained The fact has now become apparent to a large proportion of the Grange that it may become a practical school of agriculture, and of anything pertaining to the well being and uplifting of its members. The report of the committee on education at the late meeting of the National Grange, urges each Patron "to use every effort to make the teaching of agricultural science and the mechanic arts the paramount object of the agricultural colleges of the several States" They wisely hold "that the instruction in theoretical and practical agriculture should be the prime objects of these schools, and that all students who attend them under state auspices, should be required to take either the theoretical or mechanical course." Also, "that it is obvious that an intelligent farmer, whose operations are directed by knowledge of the principles which underlie them, will diffuse around him the intelligence that guides him Such an individual will prove invaluable in promoting a healthy public sentiment in favor of an educated husbandry, and the work of promoting agricultural education will go on in rapid progression."

In regard to public schools they deemed it one of the most important duties ever devolved by the National Grange upon its members, that they use every proper effort to have the elementary principals of agricultural sciences taught in the public schools.

NEW MAGAZINES.

THE MIDWINTER CENTURY. The beginning of a new story by W. D. Howells, in the Midwinter (February) Century, is a literary event, whose importance is increased by the discussion, in the past four months, of the characters, ethical purpose and literary qualities of A Modern Instance. Mr. Howell's audience has been held up to a high notch of curiosity to see the opening chapters of A Woman's Reason. His readers will not be disappointed. The scene is once more Boston, but the social atmosphere and the purpose have undergone a complete change. Only the style remains the same, but here, too, the reader will perceive freshness of attitude and a new vivacity. The fourth part of the Led-Horse Claim, by Mary Hallock Foote, heightens the dramatic interest of this fascinating story, which will end in the March number. Each part is embellished by a picture from the author's pencil. Mrs. Burnett's Through One Administration is developing a new interest as it nears the conclusion. The short story of the number is a humorously fanciful tale, by Frank R. Stockton, entitled The Spectral Mortgage.

Leading public questions receive unusual attention in this number of The Century, for which reason it is appropriate that the frontispiece should be a portrait of George William Curtis (one of Cole's most successful engravings), an autobiographical sketch of the well-known essayist and publicist being contributed by S. S. Conant, of Harper's Weekly Miss Emma Lazarus discusses The Jewish Problem with vigor and resources of fact, E V Smalley, in a graphic article, throws light on several important Features of the North west, and Edward T. Peters explains the Evils of Our Public Land Policy, to which he ascribes the prostration of agricultural interests in the Atlantic States A characteristic scene in the White House life of Lincoln is described in the Rev C Van Santvoord's recollections of A Reception by President Lincoln.

Two of the illustrated articles are noticeable for the number and excellence of the pictures and appeal directly to a large number of readers who, in one way or another, are interested in the development of American art These are Mrs. Van Rensselaer's study of American Etchers, and Miss Charlotte Adams's entertaining account of the life of Artists' Models in New York Other illustrated articles in the same number are George W. Cable's second historical paper on The Creoles in the American Revolution, and Frank H Cushing's second chapter of My Adventures in Zuni

Frederick Locker, the author of London Lyrics, is the subject of an illustrated paper by J Brander Matthews, which includes two portraits of the poet. Especially noteworthy is the variety and excellence of the poetry in the February Century, which is contributed by Edmund Clarence Stedman, Edmund W Gosse, Richard Henry Stoddard, Joaquin Miller, John Vance Cheny James Herbert Morse and Philip Bourge Marston, and in Bric-a-Brac there is a clever parody entitled, The Song of Sir Palamede, on Swinburne's last poem, by Helen Gray Cone the author of the metrical satire on Walt Whitman and Oscar Wilde in the November Century, called Narcissus in Camden.

In Topics of the Time the evil ways of the money kings are discussed under the title Thieves and Robbers, also the sensitiveness of Englishmen to American criticism, Law-making at Albany, and the movement to have works of art placed on the free list of the customs tariff Communications, Literature, Home and Society, and the World's Work, treat a variety of topics, books, and useful inventions

ST. NICHOLAS FOR FEBRUARY celebrates St Valentine's Day in capital style with an amusing story by Sophie Swett called A Queer Valentine, and one has but to read it to see the appropriateness of the title Anna North contributes The Mission of Mabel's Valentine, and there is a funny little poem My Valentine, by J. M. Anderson.

A timely and thrilling article is Joaquin Miller's In the Land of Clouds, which describes an ascent of Mount Hood by a party of tourists, and the loss and rescue of a little dog that insisted on accompanying the climbers

Another paper which is sure of a hearty welcome is one with the attractive title, A New Winter's Sport, which is written by Hjalmar H Boyesen, who introduces our American boys to the skee or Norwegian snow-shoe, which he claims possesses very many advantages, in point of ease, speed, and comfort, over the native Indian shoe

Of the serial stories, The Tinkham Brothers Tide-Mill, by J. T. Trowbridge, leaves its young heroes in a still more exciting position than last month. The installment of Frank R Stockton's Story of Viteau is, one of vivid interest, describing a journey to Paris and an encounter with robbers. Mrs Clement has an Art and Artists paper on the Flemish painters, with two beautiful reproductions of portraits of Rubens and his children, painted by the great artist himself. The Story of the Field of the Cloth of Gold, by E S. Brooks contains an interesting account of a tournament, and is illustrated by the frontispiece—a charming picture by Birch, entitled Margery's Champion Besides this and a good deal more, are poems and stories by Celia Thaxter, Frank H Converse, Palmer Cox Mary Lowe Dickinson, a play by Mary Cowden Clarke, and pictures by Rosina Emmet, Elizabeth Thompson, R B Birch, Bolles, H P Share, Hopkins, Cox Rose Muller, and others

To Please Her Husband.

Were the Words of a Good Lady, Mrs. Hawkins who has long suffered the Pain Common to Chronic Rheumatism A Woman's Patience and Fortitude well Shown.

Your reporter found Mrs Hawkins at 14 Exchange St., New Haven, Conn. "About four years ago," she said, "I was then a resident of Brooklyn, N Y I went over one morning to the Jersey City depot to see some friends off who were starting for the west. There was a strong draft of air in the depot, and in standing by the train talking to my friends, I caught a severe cold. I had no more than reached my home again when I was taken with a sudden chill and then fever set in The outcome of all was that rheumatism settled all over me I was entirely helpless. From this I have never recovered You see my hands, what a state they are in. Those are all chalky swellings and my limbs are very bad While I remained in Brooklyn I tried all sorts of remedies, but I could never gain any relief My physician said it was no use. I grew very thin and lost all my strength. Finally, after coming here, to gratify my husband, I began to take Dr Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY, and my general health has been better than ever before. I am stronger, have an excellent appetite, which I did not have for a long time It has helped my rheumatism and with a thorough trial I am in hopes of recovering completely"

Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY has been successfully used by thousands. It will build up a system which has been run down by overwork. It is the thing for the student and literary man to have at hand, and should be in the home of every mechanic FAVORITE REMEDY is economical, safe and pleasant. Buy it and try it.

Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

MESSRS J C AYER & Co', Gentlemen:

Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough, my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent I feel a hundred per cent stronger and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good

Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality

LOG ROLLING.

While Wrestling with a Fallen Tree a Lumberman Receives Consequential Damages

While on a hunting excursion in the great coal and wood region near Carbondale, Pa, the writer met William Coll, a lumberman Accustomed to life and labor in the forest from early manhood, he was a true Knight of the Axe Many a tree had fallen before his ringing strokes and fleets of rafts had borne away to market the sawed products Coll is a character, and if Oscar Wilde is right in saying that all movements in unhindered labor are graceful, our friend William, stripped for his work, and attacking a tree-as Richard I assaulted the heavy doors of Front de Boeuf's Castle, must have presented an admirable picture

One day, however—but let him tell the story himself as he to it to me

"I was out in the woods, you know, trying to start a log down a hill Thinking I could get a better purchase on it from the lower side, I tackled it there with my log rolling hook and threw my weight on the lever She started, she did, but as luck would have it, before I could get out of the way, she rolled right over me If it hadn't been for a lot of small limbs and brush lying in the road, which lifted her up, she'd a crushed me flat. As it was, I got up without a broken bone, but with some mighty bad bruises "

"Then you were all right," said his auditor

"Not by a blamed sight, stranger. AYER'S Hair Vigor restores with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often though not always cured

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled, it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable and lasting perfume.

[illegible]

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value
